“Now more than ever, given the devastating impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, our industry has an important responsibility, frankly an obligation, to support the most vulnerable populations across the globe. Our members’ actions to date are an outstanding reminder of how, when we all come together in the spirit of collaboration, we can drive positive change.

FOREWORD

In December 2020, The Consumer Goods Forum (CGF) announced its members would work together on actions to support vulnerable communities, part of a coordinated, global response to mitigate the impact of COVID-19 on those who have been hit hardest by the pandemic.

According to the United Nations, hundreds of millions of people have either lost their jobs or are at risk of losing their jobs due to the COVID-19, or are otherwise struggling to provide for their basic needs. These increasingly vulnerable people are faced with daily difficult decisions on how to use their limited resources. According to the World Bank, depending on the severity of the economic contraction, as many as 150,000,000 people will be pushed into extreme poverty in 2021.

In an urgent response to this grave global situation, CEOs launched a call to action for members to play their part with local actions in an effort to mitigate the health and economic burdens felt by vulnerable communities around the world. Some of the world's biggest retailers and manufacturers were among the CGF members that responded to the call.

The CGF's Collaboration for Healthier Lives (CHL) Coalition has, for many years, driven collaborative actions through local initiatives to facilitate the adoption of healthier diets, lifestyles and personal care habits. With the critical challenges that have emerged as result of the pandemic that people and their families across the globe are now facing, this new call serves as a direct response to their urgent needs.

To ramp up crucial support to people in vulnerable communities, a series of actions were identified, including ensuring that the most vulnerable have access to healthier foods and personal care products by donating to food banks and community programmes. In addition, the call encouraged members to work with partners who provide essential support locally. Where possible, members were asked to join CHL's regional initiatives to help drive change at scale.

Furthermore, the group agreed on developing capabilities to ensure greater efficiency across supply chains, logistics and data sharing, as well as sharing best practices and learnings on the CGF's Global Learning Mechanism. This is key in order for members to learn from each other, and to swiftly and effectively deploy their agreed actions.

The need to intensify actions to support vulnerable communities impacted by COVID-19 is critical. By joining forces and responding to this need, it is without a doubt that CGF members have a significant impact in mitigating the health and economic challenges that people in communities across the world are facing in the wake of the pandemic.

This case studies booklet highlights some of the many actions taken by some of the participating CGF member companies that responded to the pandemic. The CGF thanks all the companies and organisations that shared their actions, experiences, and data, which have been valuable in compiling this booklet.

COMMUNITY PERSPECTIVE

Thank you to the members of The Consumer Goods Forum (CGF) who have been valued partners to The Global FoodBanking Network (GFN) and our food bank partners over the years. Your commitment – as founders, funders, product contributors, policy advocates, awareness generators, and strategic partners in hunger relief and food loss and waste reduction – is extraordinary.

As the world's largest food bank network, GFN now supports 49 food banks in 44 countries which, in turn, work with almost one thousand community-based organisations on food recovery and hunger relief. Pre-COVID-19, these food banks served approximately 16,900,000 people by distributing 919,000,000 kilos of valuable food and grocery products. As needs skyrocketed as a result of the pandemic, these hard-working teams expanded their operations to serve an estimated 27,600,000 people thanks, in a large part, to support from CGF members.

Families across the world continue to struggle and food banks continue to need support. As CGF members, please encourage your teams to engage with the GFN member food banks in all communities where you have a footprint. Support GFN food bank partners by donating excess product, offering financial investment in infrastructure needs, and engaging personnel with in-kind support to supplement food bank operations and staff.

Find GFN food bank locations at www.foodbanking.org or email khanner@foodbanking.org. Thank you for making a difference for millions of families facing hunger.

Join your industry colleagues and so many other CGF members in helping support the CGF commitment to: Intensify Actions to Support Vulnerable Communities Impacted by COVID-19

A.S. Watson

A.S. Watson provided emergency relief assistance to ensure the underprivileged had the food they need, providing the necessary medical equipment and professional services to alleviate the suffering of people in the community, including the elderly, children, low-income families, and disabled persons. In Hong Kong, for example, A.S. Watson Group and their brands transformed part of its manufacturing facility to produce medical face masks and donated over 1,600,000 face masks to these vulnerable communities. And in the United Kingdom, A.S. Watson brands Savers and The Perfume Shop donated personal care products to hospitals, while Superdrug deployed over 100 full-time nurses to directly support National Health Service (NHS) hospitals in the fight against the pandemic and to support the blood transfusion service. Around 20,000,000 products were produced on this day and represented an important example of international solidarity.

Carrefour

Together with their longtime partner Les Restos du Cœur, Carrefour supported vulnerable communities affected by the pandemic by providing product donations, large-scale logistics resources, and by mobilising their employees to assist with national food collection drives. Through these initiatives, Carrefour not only contributed to assisting vulnerable populations with their immediate needs during COVID-19 and beyond, they also played their part in combatting food waste.

Colgate-Palmolive

With the COVID-19 pandemic disproportionately hitting underrepresented communities around the world, Colgate-Palmolive maximised its global reach and infrastructure to help those in need during the crisis. The company mobilised five manufacturing facilities on three continents to produce and donate 26,500,000 bars of #SafeHands soap, specially packaged with instructions on proper handwashing. In addition, Danone took part in initiatives with Les Restos du Coeur, where their support contributed to providing free meals to people in need. The company further supported vulnerable communities by collaborating with Solidarité Associations. The platform was created to tackle the challenge of connecting businesses and charities, and provides a space for retailers to match with food banks and charities so that populations in heightened situations of vulnerability as a result of the pandemic have access unsold essential products. The programme's contribution was worth more than 6,000,000,000 Vietnam Dong, with more than 25,000 vulnerable people benefiting nationwide.

General Mills

General Mills' response to the COVID-19 call to action focused on ensuring food access for vulnerable populations. They increased and adapted their giving to help equip charitable organisations with greater financial and food resources to meet the unprecedented need. This included major grants to support community food security at country level across their key markets worldwide, as well as supplemental grants to support basic community needs in their local manufacturing and sales communities. Along with their Foundation, General Mills provided an incremental 14,000,000 US Dollars in cash grants and food donations between March and November 2020. This was used to help food banks, food pantries and other leading anti-hunger organisations rise to meet elevated community needs driven by the pandemic. The company has also committed to producing an average of 10,000 pasta meals per month for a year to donate to people in need through a partnership with Foodbank Australia.

GfK SE

In partnership with the Red Cross, they supported food banks in the country and delivered hundreds of essential products.

Johnson & Johnson

Throughout the pandemic, Johnson & Johnson (J&J) has worked with governments, health authorities, NGO's and health professional organisations to mitigate the effects of COVID-19 on those most vulnerable. Supporting frontline health workers is paramount to J&J and to this end they and the Johnson & Johnson Foundation donated 50,000,000 US Dollars to support doctors, nurses, midwives, community health workers and others on the frontlines fighting COVID-19; this in addition to the 250,000,000 US Dollars committed over 10 years to help inspire, recruit, train, retain and mobilise frontline health workers through the Johnson & Johnson Center for Health Worker Innovation. Manufacturing lines around the world were temporarily converted to produce and donate hand sanitiser, while J&J's Consumer Health brands donated funds, mobilised social campaigns to drive support and worked with retailers and pharmacists to help consumers care for themselves and their loved ones. Since the onset of the pandemic, teams around the world have donated millions in funds, personal care products and personal protective equipment.

In Mexico, and as part of this announced donation, the company gave constant support to NGOs, the Network of Food Banks of Mexico, and specialised associations that focused efforts on COVID-19. In Querétaro, for example, they joined the Querétaro is One initiative. In addition, they partnered with a series of companies (The Coca-Cola Company, Mars, Mondelēz International, PepsiCo) that supported shopkeepers to run their businesses during the pandemic, by providing acrylic screens that protected them from having direct contact with consumers, as well as information on prevention, antibacterial gels, and more. And, in another example, the Kellogg's factory in Old Trafford, Manchester, UK, donated 1,000,000 servings of cereal and cereal bars to FareShare to help families within more than 100 frontline community groups in Greater Manchester who were struggling financially over the summer holidays. The cereal fed children who would usually rely on school breakfast clubs and free school meals during school term time.

Kroger

Kroger's response to the COVID-19 pandemic has focused on keeping retail stores safe and stocked for their customers, improving access to healthy, nutritious food, and supporting national and local non-profit partners who are helping millions deal with the pandemic's economic impacts. COVID-19 shined a light on Kroger's Zero Hunger | Zero Waste mission and social impact plan — highlighting the need for a more connected and resilient food system where surplus food is redistributed to feed people in need instead of sending it to landfills. In 2020, Kroger's store associates rescued more than 59,000,000 pounds of safe, wholesome food for hunger relief agencies in their communities. Through their partnership with Feeding America, Kroger and the Kroger Foundation office also directed a total of 10,200,000 US Dollars in charitable giving in 2020 to their network of food banks in their markets. This includes funds directed through The Kroger Co. Zero Hunger | Zero Waste Foundation's Emergency COVID-19 Response Fund to Feeding America, No Kid Hungry and other partners. L'Oréal

L'Oréal set out to help vulnerable communities affected by the COVID-19 outbreak in France, Spain, and Italy. In particular, the company aimed to support women, who were already struggling socially or economically, or were victims of abuse. In 2020, the company therefore created the L'Oréal Fund for Women, a three-year charitable endowment fund of 50,000,000 Euros, to support grassroots organisations through the following key actions: help women get out of poverty, help women achieve social and professional integration, provide assistance to refugee women, provide assistance to disabled women, prevent domestic/sexual violence against women and support survivors, and overcome obstacles faced by women and girls to access education.

Land O'Lakes

Land O'Lakes, Inc. leveraged its relationships with member-owners, customers and partners to address challenges brought on by the COVID-19 pandemic. The Land O'Lakes Foundation distributed 2,000,000 US Dollars of support (in partnership with its member and ag retailers) for hunger relief, PPE supplies, rural broadband, childcare, distance learning technology and basic needs. It donated over 664,000 pounds of in-kind dairy products to food banks - an increase of nearly 30% over its 2019 in-kind donations, and it donated 500,000 US Dollars to local food banks and backpack feeding programmes. To help restaurant industry employees experiencing extraordinary hardship, it donated 25,000 US Dollars to the Restaurant Employee Relief Fund. As access to education and healthcare moved online, the Land O'Lakes American Connection Project sought to partner with hundreds of organisations, across 2,800 locations in 49 states, to offer free, public Wi-Fi access. The pandemic impacted communities across the world. Land O'Lakes Venture37 – a 501(c)(3) non-profit affiliated with Land O'Lakes, supported Rwandan cooperative leaders managing COVID-19 revenue losses by coaching on effective communications tactics that uphold buyer and member relationships during challenging times.

Marks & Spencer

Marks & Spencer worked directly with National Health Service (NHS) teams and their longstanding hospital partners to help meet some of the urgent needs of the frontline NHS staff and the patients in their care. They contributed and supported by sourcing, packing, and delivering individual clothing care packs to NHS Trusts and Nightingale hospitals in London, Cardiff, Glasgow, Belfast and Birmingham to help provide comfort and dignity for discharged patients. In addition, they provided 10,000 nightwear items for patients to NHS Trusts and Nightingale Hospitals in Birmingham, Cardiff, Glasgow, and Belfast. They also donated over 4,000 pajamas to be used as scrubs to NHS Derbyshire. In addition, 13,000 specially-branded t-shirts were provided to form part of the uniform pack for the NHS Nightingale frontline team in London. The Marks & Spencer food team made twice-weekly free food deliveries for the NHS workers at their longstanding hospital partners St Mary's Hospital, Paddington, and Great Ormond Street Hospital. A total of just under 5,000 meals were donated.

Magnit

Magnit delivered over 300,000 food parcels to families and elderly people in need, distributed 150,000 discount loyalty cards to frontline medical professionals, and launched the first charity food card in Russia. The company also started a corporate volunteering programme with free home deliveries of food for elderly customers.

Mars, Incorporated

Mars Food United Kingdom (UK) provided Trussell Trust, the UK's largest food bank network, a 125,000 Pound donation to help provide 3,000,000 meals to charities, food banks and National Health Service (NHS) staff. Additional in-kind donations were earmarked for Family Action, the British organisation that provides emergency assistance and community-based support services for UK families in crisis. They also increased their food donations for Hisfood's COVID-19 emergency care pallets. Mars brand KIND donated over 700,000 bars to organisations that needed them most, including over 300,000 bars to the NHS. Also, Associates at their Kings Lynn factory donated more than 2,000 rice pouches to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital. This is just one community-level example of the work Mars has been doing to respond to the COVID-19 crisis. Together with their local markets and company foundations, they've been making a difference through their collective donations of cash and products – which in 2020 exceeded 30,000,000 US Dollars – to support the communities in which they operate and the most vulnerable in their supply chain.

McCain Foods

Through the COVID-19 pandemic, McCain Foods increased their commitment to food security by almost doubling their annual donations around the world. For example, the team in Argentina donated 37,000,000 meals worth of potatoes to The Red Argentina de Bancos de Alimentos, a non-profit Civil organisation which aims to reduce hunger and improve nutrition in Argentina. McCain also launched a global volunteering and donation initiative, 'McCain Chips In', where its mission is to contribute towards increasing food security and supporting vulnerable farmers and families in the communities where McCain operates. The McCain team in India kicked off the launch of 'McCain Chips In' by creating a partnership with the Robin Hood Army, a zero-funds volunteer organisation that works to get surplus food from restaurants and communities to serve the less fortunate. McCain India implemented actions to cover the immediate food security needs of the community through donations, and is promoting food security in McCain communities for the coming years by empowering employees to give back.

McCormick

As part of their global response to COVID-19, McCormick committed to supporting food banks in nearly 20 countries, as well as local restaurants and hospitality workers. Within the United States and internationally, the company also made multiple product donations to hospitals and those providing meals to healthcare workers. Several of their local and international business units provided financial and product donations to help healthcare workers and start-up organisations produce much needed hand sanitiser. In addition, OLD BAY, McCormick For Chefs, and the COREcares Foundation teamed up to introduce the Maryland Restaurant Relief Fund.

Migros Ticaret

In helping senior citizens and children, Migros Ticaret made monetary donations to the National Solidarity Campaign conducted by the Presidency of Republic of Turkey. Also, in collaboration with the Turkish Red Crescent, the company started the Card of Goodness projects. When customers buy cards as part of this project, Migros Ticaret contributes 5% on top of their donation, and cards are delivered to people in need all over Turkey. In addition, they donated food products to the food banks and social markets through a web-based donation platform (Whole Surplus). By donating 1,200 tonnes in 2020, they provided support in delivering more than 2,500,000 meals to the individuals in need.
